Five Mile Mountain Road is a Franklin County, Virginia-based bluegrass, old time, and classic country band with an emphasis on music for dancing. With front man Billy Hurt sawing the fiddle, Five Mile Mountain Road is known throughout the region for superb dance tunes and world-class instrumentation. Seth Boyd (banjo & guitar), Brennen Ernst (guitar & banjo), and Caleb Erikson (upright bass) round out the group's lineup. Named after one of Franklin County's signature rural byways, the group is one of the best up and coming bands around. All the members of Five Mile Mountain Road have had experience playing with other well-known bands.

Five Mile Mountain Road has been featured on Song of the Mountains, at the Blueridge Music Center, at Ferrum College, and at the Floyd Country Store. These are just a few of the many venues the group has played. This concert will mark the band's fourth performance at the Carter Family Fold, although several of the members have played the Fold previously with groups like Karl Shiflett and Big Country. Check out the group on their web site, Face Book and You Tube. Five Mile Mountain Road can hold their own with the best bands that ever graced the Carter Fold stage. They play with so much enthusiasm and energy that you won't be able to resist hitting the dance floor – if you can keep up with them.
